Background of the conference

Family health programmes have developed tremendously ever since the first maternal and child health clinic was built in Malaysia specifically, and worldwide generally. The scope has expanded to include all age groups by the life cycle approach. With the current progress of health status of family members globally, much is still need to be done. This conference will provide the opportunity for stakeholders to network and share experiences to inspire excellence and improve the value of family health care in various countries. It will also provide participants with the opportunity to be part of the family health development by sharing their research findings, especially on intervention, and suggestions for the betterment of the health of future families. This year's theme on Health Intervention Towards Community Wellness will provide and avenue for those concerned with the health and wellness of the community in which is also one of the targets in the Sustainable Development Goals. The role of research as an important tool for improvement in health management and care of the community to ensure effectiveness of a programmes is emphasized.

We are fortunate that this year's conference was made possible with collaboration between UPM and the Ministry of Health Malaysia and Universitas Sumatera Utara, Medan, Indonesia

It is our greatest hope that this collaboration will continue in future programmes and activities.

Objectives of the conference

- ❖ As a platform for researchers to share their research findings for the benefit of health care of the community;
- ❖ To update participants on the current intervention studies in family health towards community empowerment in health care;
- ❖ To develop networking and communication between stakeholders and institutions;
- ❖ To increase the scope of research and development in the field of intervention studies.

Assalamualaikum* and a very warm welcome to all delegates,

It gives me great pleasure for me to welcome the participants from all over the world who came to Malaysia for this exciting conference. In these times calling for social relevance of scientific activities, we are very fortunate to see the important issues are focussed in this conference. This conference is about looking at the new realities that families face and analyzing them so that we can develop effective and inclusive policies and programs. Effective public health actions are based on scientifically derived

Many of the advances in public health have become possible through research. Research will continue to be essential for identifying and anticipating health problems and the optimal strategies for addressing them. Strategies that seem very logical may in fact not succeed for a variety of unforeseen reasons. Therefore, public health systems and programmes cannot be assumed to function cost-effectively without continuous monitoring and evaluation. Thus, it is essential that new public health strategies undergo rigorous evaluation before being scaled up, and once scaled up, periodically reviewed to ensure their continuing effectiveness in diverse groups and populations.

The magnitude and success of public health efforts will vary both in time and place in different areas of the world. Nevertheless, the principles of public health remain the same. The actions that should be taken are determined by the nature and magnitude of the problems affecting the health of the community. What can be done will be determined by scientific knowledge and the resources available. It is hoped that through this conference, relevant information can be disseminated to policy makers, program planners, and practitioners that will contribute to better understanding of the context and process by which effective implementation of public health interventions can be achieved.

I wish you all a successful and enlightening conference.

Foreword Message

Dean
Faculty of Public Health
University of Sumatera Utara, Indonesia

Assalamualaikum Warahmatullahi Wabarakatuh and greetings from University of Sumatera Utara

It is a great pleasure for the Faculty of Public Health, University Sumatera Utara to be the collaborator of the International Family Health Conference 2019 organized by the Department of Community Health, Faculty of Medicine and Health Sciences, Universiti Putra Malaysia with the theme 'Health Intervention towards Community Wellness'. The theme is very important especially for Indonesia whereby non-communicable diseases are on the rise, whilst infectious diseases still remain a significant part of disease burden. Indonesia is also one of the countries which did not meet the 5th Millennium Development Goal (MDGs) target on maternal mortality.

In order to improve the wellness of the community, especially to decrease the maternal mortality, Indonesia is currently running a program which is focused on a Family Approach, i.e. the Healthy Indonesia Program. There are 12 indicators in this program, which include childbirth at health care facilities, exclusive breastfeeding, family planning, childhood immunization, and others. The goal of the program is to develop a healthy Indonesia nation. Hopefully, besides building networking among the participants, this conference can inspire health intervention activities among participating countries to improve the quality of family health.

I would like to express our gratitude to the Department of Community Health, Faculty of Medicine and Health Sciences, Universiti Putra Malaysia for the opportunity to be part of this auspicious event. I look forward to further successful collaboration with Universiti Putra Malaysia in the future.

Foreword Message

Head of Department of Community Health
Faculty of Medicine and Health Sciences
Universiti Putra Malaysia

Assalamualaikum and welcome to Malaysia,

I am pleased to welcome you to this conference on "Health Intervention toward community wellness". Over the past decade, there has been strong recognition in public health to take the evidence into consideration when developing programs. The efforts include identifying the evidence of effectiveness for different policies and programs, translating that evidence into recommendations, and increasing the extent to which that evidence is used in public health practice. Evidence-based programs aim to not only impact outcomes for individual, but to change the population prevalence rates of a problem. The ultimate goal is to reduce current and future costs for expensive societal interventions, hence, health interventions in Public Health should never be underestimated.

I am happy to note that this conference covers a wide range of topics which are very relevant to health professionals, students, academicians and policy makers. Therefore, as you participate in the conference, I would like you to keep in mind the importance of research in promoting community wellness. Next, we need to monitor and assess health promotion activities to confirm that activities are actually having an impact. I really believe that universities can play an important role in the research and monitoring that is required to make health promotion work.

I have to extend further thanks to the committee members of Universitas Sumatera Utara who have teamed up in organising the conference. With that, I would like to wish you all a very fruitful and successful conference and to our foreign guests, have a pleasant stay in Malaysia.

Assalamualaikum* and a good day to all delegates,

Alhamdulillah, all praise to Allah, for making this day possible.

On behalf of the organising committee, we would like to welcome all of you to the International Family Health Conference 2019.

It has been a great experience of long and exciting months of preparation for all the organising committee in putting together all that need to be done for this international event to ensure that it is rich in content and satisfying for the delegates. We anticipate intellectual excitement and stimulating interactions among delegates from different countries. With the theme of Health Intervention for Community Wellness, we have focused on a collection of research and programmes which covers all members in a family, which is the smallest unit that contributes to a community. Thus, it provides an opportunity for researchers with diverse interests to disseminate as well as to network for future collaboration. With one keynote presentation, six symposia, five plenary sessions, and more than 100 oral and poster presentations, delegates are encouraged to take full advantage of this opportunity. For delegates who are in Malaysia for the first time, enjoy Kajang town which is known as the Satay Town, the night markets in Kajang and Bandar Baru Bangi, theme parks, night life and tourist attractions in Putrajaya and Kuala Lumpur, and not forgetting the famous Kajang Satay.

We would like to extend our gratitude to all the distinguished speakers for sharing their vast knowledge, expertise and experience in this conference. Our heartfelt gratitude and congratulations to all members of the organising committee, who have worked hard conscientiously to ensure the success of this conference. Our sincere appreciation for the successful collaboration between Universiti Putra Malaysia, Ministry of Health Malaysia and Universitas Sumatera Utara, which had made this conference possible.

Have an inspiring conference everyone!!
